

THIRTY-FIRST YEAR

LANCASTER, KY., THURSDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 19, 1920.

NUMBER 22.

WEATHER CUTS

TOBACCO CROP

Output, Estimated Before Rains, Reduced In State 5,940,000 Pounds.

CORN OUTLOOK BRIGHT

FRANKFORT KY.—July estimates of conditions, contained in a crop report issued Saturday by W. C. Hanna, Commissioner of Agriculture, and the United States Bureau of Estimates, were made up before the recent rains, and show a reduction of 5,940,000 pounds in the tobacco estimate, which "might be increased or decreased later, depending on the weather." Corn and potatoes showed up better. The report follows:

Tobacco shows a slight reduction from July estimates, because of rather poor condition in some sections, but as there is a big acreage in the Burley belt, which partly makes up for the reduced acreage in Western Kentucky, and both sections can yet make a full normal yield if given favorable weather, the estimate of tobacco production is not greatly reduced. The United States total tobacco crop is considerably larger than last year's.

Corn Yield Is Large.

Probable corn production in Kentucky is estimated at 96,941,000 bushels, compared to a July 1 estimate of 86,170,000 and a crop last year of 82,500,000. Wheat is estimated at 6,304,000 bushels, compared to a July 1 estimate of 6,275,000 and a production of 12,029,000 last year; potatoes, 6,355,000 compared to prospects July 1 for 5,971,000 and a crop last year of 5,040,000, and tobacco, 431,640,000 pounds, compared to a July 1 estimate of 437,580,000 and last year's production of 456,500,000.

Fruit Crop Good.

Rye production is estimated at 635,000 bushels, compared to 744,000 bushels last year; oats at 11,615,000 bushels compared to 9,900,000 bushels last year; barley 112,000 bushels compared to 100,000 bushels last year, and sweet potatoes 1,438,000 bushels compared to 1,680,000 bushels last year.

Fruit is a good crop in Kentucky as a whole, apples being estimated at 5,063,000 bushels and peaches 1,526,000 bushels. The condition of other crops in Kentucky is reported as follows: Alfalfa, 90 per cent; millet 86; pasture, 88; cowpeas, 86; field beans, 90; tomatoes, 91; cabbage, 90; onions 92; grapes 82; watermelons, 78; muskmelons, 79; broom corn, 85; and sorghum, 89.

RECORD-BREAKING

Land Sale Held by I. M.

Dunn Real Estate Agency.

Part of Bruce Farm Sells High.

One of the best sales conducted recently in Boyle county was that of the W. D. Williams farm, sold last Saturday by the I. M. Dunn Real Estate Agency of Danville, the total realized for the farms being something over $80,000.

Tracts, one, two and three were purchased by Mr. J. M. Cress and Mr. Thomas Hendren, a former Garrardite, at $376.50 an acre. The combined tracts being a fraction over one hundred and twenty-eight acres. Tract number four was purchased by J. Lee Murphy, of Hedgeville, at $300 an acre, this tract embracing about fifty acres.

The Sibbey farm which was sold at the same time was bought by Mr. Price Elliott, the tract containing 107 acres and brought $147.00 per acre.

Col. I. M. Dunn was on the block and the way he handled the sale throughout, stamps him as one of the very best auctioneers in the state. This real estate firm is composed of Col. I. M. Dunn, Joseph Jennings and Hon. B. G. Fox and their services are much sought after throughout this and other states.

WOMEN GET RIGHT

To Vote In November.

Tennessee yesterday became the thirty-sixth state to ratify the Susan B. Anthony Federal suffrage amendment. The constitutional change will become effective in time for the 17,000,000 women of the country to vote in the Presidential election in November, unless the lower house of the Tennessee Assembly rescinds its action in adopting the ratification resolution, which passed yesterday by a vote of 49 to 47.

A GRAND DAY

The "Get Acquainted"

Tour Proves Quite A Success.

MUCH GOOD WILL RESULT.

Nothing that has ever been attempted or accomplished, will redound more good to Lancaster and Garrard County, than the "Get Acquainted" tour, under the auspices of the Lancaster Commercial Club, which visited the towns of Bryantsville, Buena Vista, Hickman and Bourne, yesterday.

Promptly at nine o'clock yesterday morning, twenty-five automobiles were lined up on the Public Square and all filled to their capacity, everybody happy in anticipation of the delightful day, and none were disappointed.

After several pieces by our own Lancaster Band, of which everybody is proud, dressed in their new uniforms, they have never given better music than on this occasion. Headed by Tourmaster W. A. Farnau, the motorcade of 25 cars and one hundred and twenty-five of Lancaster's best citizens, made the start for Bryantsville, which was the first stop on our schedule.

While the crowd there was not as large as we had expected and desired, never-the-less it was made up with quality, and we were warmly greeted. After a few pieces by the band, we were entertained by a welcome address by Mr. Hogan Ballard, in his usual happy and eloquent strain.

Mr. W. A. Farnau, who was master of ceremonies throughout the day, and whom all are indebted to for the success of the tour, after a short talk explaining the object and results to be expected from the "Get Acquainted" meetings, introduced Mr. R. H. Tomlinson, who addressed the crowd with much earnestness and feeling. The other speakers here being G. B. Swinebroad and "Uncle Tandy" Quisenberry.

By this time our schedule was up and we were off for Buena Vista, where we were due to take lunch and meet the people of this section at 1 o'clock. Mr. Will Scott, one of the most prosperous farmers in that section of the county, very generously tendered the party the use of his front lawn where our dinners were to be spread, he having already provided, two large tubs of ice water, which was eagerly consumed by the thirsty tourists. Under the large sugar trees the lunch was spread and a grand picnic it proved to be. By the time lunch was over a large crowd of surroundings citizens had assembled and after a very pleasing address of welcome by Prof. J. R. Abner, one of our party and former townsman of Buena Vista, Mr. A. T. Scott, was introduced and addressed the people from the platform of the store where he did business many years before. Others speaking here were, J. E. Robinson, Wm. Fox Logan, R. H. Tomlinson, John M. Farra and "Uncle Tandy."

The next stop was Hickman where we were scheduled for 2 o'clock. A number of people met the motorcade in front of the store of Holman Glass. After music, Rev. C. D. Strother, Billy Miller, John Farra, "Uncle Tandy" and George Brown entertained the gathering of possibly 75 people who had assembled. The scenery at this place always beautiful, was a delight to the eye of everyone.

Our next and last stop was Bourne, which proved the surprise of the day for the crowd which had assembled, was estimated at 250 people, practically blocking the main street, until it was almost impossible for the cars to get up to the store of Mr. W. S. Bowling, from the steps of which the speaking was to take place. Many seats and chairs had been arranged in the yard of Mr. Bowling which did not begin to hold the crowd and the main street was resorted to. The speakers here being: Mr. B. F. Hudson, Billy Miller, L. G. Davidson and R. H. Tomlinson.

Without a single mishap, the entire party reached Lancaster about 5:30 o'clock, all happy and with one accord, pronounced it "The end of a perfect day."

Ralph Gilbert Estes.

That's the name of the ten pound boy that arrived at the happy home of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Estes on August 11th. He is a bouncing young democrat and is named for the next Congressman from the Eighth District.

"When God Laughs" will be the subject of Mr. Bourland's sermon at the Christian Church next Sunday morning. His subject at the Methodist Church in the evening union services will be "The Christian Conflict."

LEXINGTON

SPECIAL

Trains 39 and 40. New Thru Train Service to and from Cincinnati via Lexington.

The visit of the Chamber of Commerce of Lexington to our city on May 11th, last, while on tour of the Blue Grass section has resulted in the Louisville and Nashville Railroad placing in service (effect August 15) between Stanford and Cincinnati the LEXINGTON SPECIAL a thru full vestibuled electric lighted fast train to and from Central Union Station, Cincinnati via Lexington.

The Commercial Club of this city on the date of the visit of the progressive business men of the Blue Grass metropolis called to their attention the great need of closer and better railroad facilities from this section to Lexington. The Chamber of Commerce thru its President, Frank Jones and Secretary, Manager Frank Dunn immediately upon their return took up with the management of the Louisville and Nashville thru General Agent Frank B. Carr this matter. After the subject had been thoroughly gone into by the managing heads of this great system they decided to place in service this splendid train, to be known as the LEXINGTON SPECIAL operating without change of cars to Cincinnati via Winchester, Lexington and Paris. This is the fastest train now in service between Lexington and Cincinnati, making the run between these cities in three hours, stopping only south of Latonia at Falmouth, Cincinnati, Paris, Lexington and Winchester and making all stops between Stanford and Winchester. See time table published in this paper.

This is unquestionably the best service ever established from this section to central and northern Kentucky and Cincinnati and is greatly appreciated and will be well patronized by the traveling public. This train in addition to the equipment mentioned above carries Pullman Parlor Car and mail and express. The LEXINGTON SPECIAL together with the thru trains to and from Louisville (Nos 27 and 28) gives to Lancaster the best train service in its history. Our hats are off to the LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE and also the hustlers in the HEART OF THE BLUE GRASS.

SCHOOL

ATTENDANCE

Shows Marked Improvement.

The report comes that the country schools of Garrard County are full to seating capacity. Miss Helen Gill, recently elected by the County Board, Attendance Officer, is on her job with fine enthusiasm. How the country schools have changed from previous years many of them having scarcely enough pupils in attendance to keep the school going to the present condition of having so many in attendance that the teachers are working overtime shows how well she is succeeding in her work. Miss Gill in connection with the other school officials is bringing the stringent provisions of the new law to the attention of the people and informing the parents of their duty to keep their children in school in a most effective and satisfactory way. The requirements of the law are new to the people and the Attendance Officer is using her best efforts to aid the parents in complying with the spirit and letter of the law without annoying the school patrons. The Record is interested in popular education and is gratified to report the success of the officials in securing these greatly increased attendance at the public schools.

Fine Boy.

Mr. George Dishon is about the happiest fellow in the county. He is rejoicing over the arrival of a fine boy, who made his appearance at his home a few days ago. George says that he is undoubtedly the finest baby he ever saw, and that he looks so much like his "daddy" he has named him "George Jr."

Rev. E. B. Bourland will be one of the leaders at Camp Daniel Boone during the Hi-Y Period at that Camp for boys. The period will begin on August 25th and close Sept. 1. Several of Lancaster's High School boys will accompany Mr. Bourland.

$5,000 DAMAGES

Awarded to W S Burch

OF STANFORD, AGAINST MR. F. M. WARE, WELL KNOWN McKINNEY CITIZEN.

In circuit court at Stanford last Saturday, the jury trying the case of Attorney William S. Burch, against Mr. F. M. Ware awarded damages to Burch in the sum of $5,000. Mr. Rowan Saufley was awarded damages in the sum of $500 against Mr. Ware. Several months ago near Moreland Attorney Burch and Mr. Saufley were driving toward Danville in a buggy when their vehicle was struck by an automobile driven by Mr. Ware. Both gentlemen were thrown out. Mr. Burch sustained a broken leg and other injuries and was under treatment in the Danville and Boyle County hospital for several weeks. Mr. Saufley was not so seriously injured as was Mr. Burch. Mr. Saufley is the deputy United States Marshall for this district. Mr. Burch was formerly county attorney of Lincoln county and made the race some years ago for Commonwealth's attorney in this district. Mr. Burch was represented by Judge E. V. Puryear, of Danville, and Mr. Saufley by George D. Florence, of Stanford.

Hill.

Mrs. T. O. Hill passed away Sunday evening at nine o'clock in Crab Orchard where she had been several weeks for treatment. She has been in ill health for two years. After having influenza in January 1918, her health had been undergoing a general decline, and she died of a complication of diseases. Mrs. Hill was born September 13th, 1860, and died August 15th, 1920. She was married to Mr. T. O. Hill September 10th, 1879, and was the only child of Mr. John Teater who preceded her in death about ten months ago. Her mother, who was Margaret Burton, before marriage died forty-eight years ago, while she was left motherless at the age of twelve, she was blessed with one who filled her mother's place well, Mrs. John Teater, and to whom Mrs. Hill was devoted. She is survived by her husband and four children, Mrs. Walker Bradshaw, Mrs. Talbott Jenkins, Mr. Jesse Hill of Buckeye, and Smiley Hill of Lancaster. There was also one infant son, John, who died about thirty five years ago.

She united with the Methodist church at Gunn's Chapel at the age of twelve, where she was ever a faithful and consistent member to the time of her death.

Mrs. Hill was born and raised near Buckeye and always made her home here after marriage. She will not only be sadly missed by her husband and children, but also by her relatives and a wide circle of friends. She was a devoted wife and mother, and made a happy home for her family.

Her husband gratified her every wish during her illness and did every thing in his power for her recovery. Her friends paid her a beautiful tribute in the floral offerings and in the large crowd that gathered at her funeral, many coming from a distance.

Funeral services were conducted at the grave in the Lancaster cemetery Monday afternoon at three o'clock. Mr. Hill and family have the deepest and sincerest sympathy of their friends and the community at large for they have lost in her, a woman of beautiful and devout character, but she has only changed her earthly abode to her eternal home.

A few of those from a distance that attended the funeral were, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Bogie and son, Mrs. Permella Bogie, and Mrs. Tom Chestnut of Lexington, Mr. and Mrs. A. Morford of Frankfort, Mrs. L. L. Sanders and son, Mrs. Duke of Crab Orchard, Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins and son, Mr. and Mrs. E. Tudor of Newby, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cotton, Mr. and Mrs. R. Baker of Richmond and Mr. S. N. Morford of Nicholasville.

Card Of Thanks.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our friends for their kindness shown to us in our recent bereavement. We will ever remember the thoughtfulness extended to us during these sad hours.

Mr. T. O. Hill and family.

COX-ROOSE-

VELT CLUB

Organized Here Monday Night.

About twenty-five staunch young democrats met at the court house last Monday night and organized a Cox-Roosevelt Club, and a more enthusiastic bunch you scarcely ever see. The meeting was called to order by J. E. Robinson, chairman of the Democratic County Committee and spoke of the importance of such a club and the results that can and will be derived from such an organization in the coming campaign.

On motion, duly seconded, Mr. A. D. Avant was unanimously chosen president, of the club and Billy Miller was likewise unanimously chosen its secretary. Two better selections could not have been made, as both are fine young men, popular, energetic and will whoop up the boys from now until the November election, when Cox and Roosevelt will go over the plate.

President Avant has called a mass meeting for tonight, (Thursday) at the court house, when other members will be added to the club. They expect to get a membership of at least 500 before the week is out.

DEMOCRATS, COME TO THIS MEETING TONIGHT, and join the Cox-Roosevelt Club.

Woolfolk.

The remains of Miss Anna Lee Woolfolk, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Woolfolk of Lexington, were laid to rest in the cemetery here Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Miss Woolfolk had been in declining health for a number of years, but at the time of her death, seemed stronger and better than usual, when on Friday evening at 10:30 the end came, suddenly and without warning.

The funeral services were held at her home on North Broadway, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. F. M. Tindler, of North Middletown, a close personal friend of the family, presiding, assisted by Rev. T. C. Edmonds of the Christian church, with the Rev. B. C. Horton of the First Methodist church, Lexington, presiding.

The body was then brought to Lancaster for burial, where amid a large concourse of friends and relatives, the remains were laid to rest in a bed of flowers, the number of which were beautiful in their mute expression of love and sympathy. A short burial service conducted by Rev. F. M. Tindler assisted by Rev. Palmeter.

Perhaps no more beautiful spirit than that of "Anna Lee" has ever winged its flight heavenward. With the weakening of the body, which began in her young maidenhood, her noble spirit developed and expanded until it seemed her affliction became a benediction to all with whom she came in contact. Her cheerfulness and courage, her resignation and thoughtfulness of others, combined with an unflinching faith and trust in the Life Beyond were a source of marvel and wonder to those about her.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family and especially to the father and mother and loving sister Marguerite, who had ministered so unselfishly to her in her declining days. May Hope whisper her comforting words to them in the lonely hours, that are to come.

"There is no death: An Angel form Walks o'er the earth, with silent tread, He bears our best loved things away, And we call them—dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate, He plucks our fairest flowers, Transplanted into bliss, They now Adorn immortal bowers."

COUNTIES TIE ON

BURLEY CUTOUT

Even Break In Mass Meeting said to Forecast Failure of No-Crop Plan.

LEXINGTON—Failure of the movement for a cutout of the Burley tobacco crop in 1921 is indicated by reports from mass meetings in eighteen counties Saturday.

Bluegrass counties voted solidly against the cutout, while outlying counties in most instances voted for it.

Results by counties follows: For Cutout—Owen, Bath, Carroll, Grant, Mason, Nicholas, Fleming, Shelby and Montgomery. Total, nine. Against Cutout—Fayette, Franklin, Harrison, Jessamine, Henry, Madison, Boyle, Woodford and Oldham. Total, nine.

Each county is entitled to one vote in the convention here next Wednesday at 11 o'clock when final action will be taken.

The results of the county conventions are said to signify almost positively that there will be no cutout, as bluegrass counties, with their much larger production, probably would not yield to a vote by counties, even should counties not yet report swell the vote in favor of the cutout to a majority.

At a meeting of about 200 Fayette growers, behind closed doors, it was the consensus of opinion that this county will never enter into an agreement for a cutout even if every other burley growing county does so. The Fayette meeting named three delegates to the convention here Wednesday.

In two counties, resolutions were adopted in favor of curtailing the acreage. Franklin County growers voted to limit the crop to five acres with two and a half acres more each 100 acres up to 300.

Oldham County growers would place the limit at two acres for each 50 acres of ground.

Shelby county, voting against the cutout, also urged that the 1920 crop be held for satisfactory prices.

While the cutout plan seemingly is on shaky legs, the movement for organization of a Burley Growers' Association seems to have made much headway.

Organization Plans In Making.

John W. Newman, Versailles, former State Commissioner of Agriculture, chairman of the temporary organization, has named the following committee to meet next Tuesday to draw up complete plans for the organization to be presented to the convention the next day: P. M. Dean, Carrollton; Perry M. Gaines, Carrollton; T. B. Hill, Mount Sterling; Merritt O'Neil, Mercer County and James Gay, Owen County.

Seven hundred of 1,000 questionnaires mailed to growers in the Burley belt asking their attitude on the cutout resulted in an even break, 350 for and the same number against.

Mercer County growers voted to postpone action until the middle of January to ascertain market conditions then.

No meetings were held in Bourbon and Marion Counties, but the sentiment in the latter county is regarded as strongly opposed to the cutout.

REDUCED FEE

IS O. K.

County Clerks Lose On Appeal to Attorney General.

FRANKFORT, KY.—County Court clerks are entitled to 15 cents and not 25 cents for issuing dog licenses, according to an opinion rendered Saturday by Attorney General Charles I. Dawson. The last session of the General Assembly reduced the dog license fee received by county clerks from 25 cents to 15 cents and allowed the Commissioner of Agriculture 3 per cent instead of 5 per cent of the license taxes. County clerks have written to Attorney General Dawson inquiring if they are entitled during the remainder of the term for which they are elected to collect the 25 cent tax. The Attorney General held that the reduction of fees is not in violation of the section of the Constitution that provides that the compensation of any city, county, town or municipal officer shall not be changed after his election or appointment, or during his term of office, and that the Legislature had the right to reduce the compensation.

ORIGIN OF TENNIS DATES TO GREEKS

Was King's Sport In
12th. Century—Game
Has 200,000 Devotees In America Today.

Washington D. C.—Tennis, which has reached new heights of popularity this summer, having 200,000 American devotees, according to a recent estimate, has an interesting history, which is summarized in a communication of the National Geographical Society by J. R. Hildebrand as follows:

"One must go back to the Greeks and Romans for the origin of tennis, which was introduced into England by way of France. In the twelfth century a game, with ball and plaited gut bat, was played on horseback. Then came 'La boude,' in which the horses were abandoned. This was a 'royal game,' at least from the time that Louis X. died, after excessive playing and induced chills. Chaucer wrote: 'But canstow playen racket to and fro?' While the church found it necessary to prohibit priests on the continent from spending too much time upon it.

More Players Than Drunkards

"Margot was the Molla Bjurstedt of the twelfth century, famed especially for her back-hand stroke. Henry VIII. of England was a youthful devotee, while Louis XIV's heavy expense accounts show salaries paid to caretakers of his courts. Complaint was heard at one time that there were 'more tennis players in Paris than drunkards in England.' In Shakespeare's Henry V. are these lines: 'When we have matched our rackets to these balls. We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set. Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.'

"Manufacture of the accessories of the game became so flourishing an industry in England in the sixteenth century that appeal was made for a protective tariff against imported balls.

Hand Used For Bat

"Until that century the hand continued to be used for batting, but soon the racket came into general use. A match, probably played on a Windsor Castle court, is recorded in which the King of Castile gave his opponent 'fifteen' because the latter used his hand.

"The meeting at the tennis courts of Versailles was an important step in the progress of the French Revolution.

"Few sports call into play so many muscles or combine mental and muscular activity to such a degree as tennis. Evidence that the Romans soon forsook the Greek ideal of a sound mind in a sound body is found in the fact that Horace and Virgil could not join their patron, Maecenas, at tennis because of weak eyes and poor digestion. It was truly a royal game when Kings of France and England played it; and it typified the democracy of the New World when ambassadors, generals, politicians and cow-boys joined Roosevelt's famous 'tennis cabinet' back of the White House executive offices."

Bringing Home

The Honey.

In most communities there are two classes of citizens—those who produce, and those who do not.

The productive class brings home the honey.

The other class merely consumes that which the producer produces.

There would be less hue and cry over the cost of living if more people would conscientiously produce instead of being content merely to consume.

Food and other commodities are hard to produce at best, and the idleness and indifference of the non-productive class only accentuates its scarcity and contributes to its cost.

A hive of honey bees is a good thing for mankind to study. The bee that does not work is not allowed to eat—it is not permitted to consume the fruits of the labors of other bees.

We humans, with all of our superior intelligence, can still profit from the example set by the little honey bee.

Future generations may learn to see, where we of today are groping in darkness.

The honey bee may teach them.

Every man owes a duty to his country. Some pay, and others want the country to pay them.

There are, however, some people who are in no danger of entering hell. The door would be slammed in their faces.

The Inheritance

By EVELYN LEE

"What a delightful mystery!" voiced pretty, vivacious Irene Barnes, but her fiancé, Ward Trisham, did not seem inclined to echo the sentiment.

"Neither Victor Read nor myself share your romantic views, Irene," was the somewhat spiritless reply. "If Uncle Bortelle planned purposely to put us through a period of uncertainty and suspense, wasting the best year of our lives in idle guesswork and waiting, he couldn't have done it more effectively."

"I don't see as to wasting and waiting, Ward," said Irene. "On the contrary, Mr. Bortelle seems to have blocked out a most reasonable and practical program for you two. Of course it means work, and you two have never done much of that, but when the year is over, if you go through the ordeal creditably, just think how the experience will benefit and uplift you. Of course you and Victor will start in at once?"

"I suppose we will have to," responded Ward, but in a grudging tone. "We are not sponges, and haven't been discounting the future with hopes that Uncle Bortelle might die and leave us his fortune, but I must say he led us to believe that we could count on something substantial, no matter what happened."

"Yes, I think he has spoiled you two boys," said Irene severely. "He has certainly encouraged you to keep from soiling your delicate white hands, and stay around his home like tender young children who might fall down and stub your toes if they did not have a guiding hand. Oh! I can scold when you deserve it, and I always tell the truth, and I advise you strictly to follow out the injunctions of your dead uncle, who was so good and kind to you."

Somewhat in the same way at that very hour Victor Read was reciting his woes to Madge Steele. The two young men were like brothers instead of cousins, and the young ladies had been close girl chums for years. Mr. Bortelle had approved the double match, only for several months before his death he had seemed anxious to postpone it. His lawyer alone was aware of the fact that some unwise investments had almost beggared him.

Just after the funeral Lawyer Marsh had called in the nephews for a confidential consultation. "I have some important but strange disclosures to make to you, young men," he said. "You will notice Mr. Bortelle's old safe in the corner of my office here. It is upon his written instructions that I have removed it. Its combination is in a sealed envelope in the bank safety deposit vault box, directed to be delivered to you one year to a day after his death. Until then the safe cannot be opened."

"But why did uncle go to all this circumlocution?" spoke Ward.

"Yes, and what is in the safe, to be guarded so mysteriously?" questioned Victor.

"He told me that I was to reveal these facts to you. He directed that both of you arrange to remove to Lupton, where, as you know, he owns the local furniture store and also a garage. You, Ward, are to take charge of the former as manager, and Victor, in a like capacity, the garage. He hopes you will work hard to make them pay; you are to have each drawing accounts of forty dollars per week and make monthly reports of the business to me. At the end of a year you are to open the safe."

"But all the property uncle owned?" said Ward.

"Yes, and his bonds and money?" added Victor.

"Young men," replied Mr. Marsh seriously, "I would advise you not to bank on those former assets. To be plain, except for the old home and his two stores Mr. Bortelle left little of value. He was generous and loving to you while in life. Be diligent and show your respect for him now in following out his wishes."

"We'll do it!" cried Ward, stirred by a memory of the generous uncle.

It was hard for Ward and Victor to go forty miles away from old scenes and Irene and Madge, and see them only every alternate Sunday on a flying home visit. It was harder still to set mind, energies and muscle at the unfinished task of real work and business responsibilities, but by the end of a month results showed. Ward was a natural-born salesman and had never guessed it until now. Victor, pleasant and popular, drew business to the garage. Mr. Marsh commended them cheerfully for the systematic manner in which they managed their respective enterprises.

An inkling of the fact that their lovers were not to inherit untold riches gave Irene and Madge an economical and industrious impulse, and they set at work to plan for the future on a sensible scale.

And one year to the day after the death of Mr. Bortelle the safe in the lawyer's office was opened. It was empty, except for a single sheet of paper, which read:

"If Ward and Victor are the kind of boys I think they are, they will have proven themselves business men and will value even the little I have been able to save out of the wreck, the two stores and the old home."

"Wise old Uncle Bortelle!" commented Ward tenderly. "One year has made real business men of us, a more precious heritage than the fortunes we once expected."

Honest toil is a credit to any man, but many people object to the credit system.

The beautiful peace of the old world is so benevolently unselfish that one wonders when it commenced and if it will ever end.

The poor man has reason to be joyful in his adversity. He doesn't have to employ an attorney to keep him out of jail for pulling crooked deals in the realms of high finance.

COMMON SCAB AMONG SHEEP

During Past Decade Great Progress Has Been Made in Eradication of Ailment.

Common scab was formerly the greatest drawback to the sheep industry of the United States, but during the past decade great progress has been made in its eradication. The system of grazing sheep on the open ranges of the western part of the United States was such that the flockmasters had great difficulty in keeping the flock free from the scab. The sheep were very frequently exposed to the disease by infectious ranges and trails, "picking up strays" from infected flocks, and in many other ways. It became desirable for the department of agriculture to extend aid to the

An Advanced Case of Scab, Showing Area Denuded of Wool.

Industry by controlling the interstate movement of sheep to prevent the carrying of the infection from one state to another.

Scab is exceedingly contagious and is transmitted by direct contact with animals or objects that are carriers of the mites. Although unable to propagate except on sheep, the mites may be harbored temporarily by animals other than sheep and may live on goats for a long period.

A flock of scabby sheep will infect the roads, trails, sheds, yards, bed grounds, pastures, ranges, and the ground around the watering places. It is therefore important that the flock receive proper treatment as soon as the disease appears, before the infection becomes scattered over the premises.

SCIENTIFIC FEEDING IS BEST

Supply Food in Right Proportions to Meet Requirements Without Waste of Nutrients.

To supply food in the right proportion to meet the various requirements of the animal, without a waste of food nutrients, constitutes scientific feeding. It is by carefully studying the composition of feeding stuffs, the proportion in which they are digested by different animals and under different conditions, and the requirement of animals for the various food nutrients when at rest, at work, giving milk, producing wool, mutton, beef, pork, etc., that the principles of feeding have been worked out. In applying these principles in practice the cost and special adaptations of different feeding stuffs must, of course, be taken into account.

SIRE TO AID FUR BEARERS

"Better Sires—Better Stock" Campaign Indorsed by Breeders and Fanciers' Association.

The National Breeders and Fanciers' Association of America has indorsed the "Better Sires—Better Stock" movement. Through its secretary, the association has notified the United States department of agriculture of its aim, through better sires, to improve the quality of fur-bearing animals raised in confinement.

In addition to raising animals kept primarily for fur, members of the association also breed such creatures as rabbits, cavies, and mice used for pets and scientific purposes. The value of pure-bred sires is especially great for classes of animals like those mentioned because of their prolificacy.

DECLINE IN BREEDING SOWS

Decrease of 9.9 Per Cent Is Noted by Bureau of Estimates—States Affected.

Breeding sows declined 9.9 per cent during the year ending April 1, 1920, according to investigations of the bureau of crop estimates. The same number of these animals for both years is reported for South Carolina and Georgia, and increases for Florida, Texas, and New Mexico. The heaviest declines were found in Massachusetts, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, Utah, and Idaho.

The Women As Voters.

When the Democratic campaign opens in Lancaster at the court house next Monday, Congressman Albin W. Barkley, the speaker will face an audience which we think will tax the capacity of the house and will be composed of at least one half women. The intelligent, educated and cultured women of this locality who are anxious to learn in detail what are the merits of the two great political parties of the nation. Many of these ladies have not desired suffrage rights and had it been left with them would not have assumed the responsibility which has been laid upon them by recent legislation but since this duty has been brought to them desire to use the ballot intelligently and in the way which will be for the best. The women are anxious to hear the address on political matters from one who has the reputation of Congressman Barkley. A gentleman of the reputed character, ability and eloquence of Mr. Barkley would naturally attract an audience of ladies. Having personally known him for many years and believing that he fully measures up to his reputation in every respect we should be pleased that every woman in Garrard county could hear what Mr. Barkley shall say at the court house Monday. It would be at least a fine beginning in the campaign of political education which the average woman shall demand before she exercises the franchise privilege granted her. Men as well as women are afforded a great opportunity to hear a good political speech, in fact, we believe the best political speaker in the state next Monday. Those of all political opinions should hear Mr. Barkley, who can conveniently arrange their affairs to do so.

As The Editor Sees It

Two young men met on the public street and entered into a conversation. One of the young men lived in the town, while the other was from a nearby village. A pretty girl came by. The town boy sized her up and made a suggestive remark. Then they both looked, and laughed and looked again. Another girl passed, with a careless look in their direction but without speaking. The town boy was silent, but he from the neighboring village appraised her charms, expressed his opinion, and—the fight was on. It makes a difference whose sister you talk about.

A good citizen stopped us on the street a few days ago. He had a case of nerves. He was peeved because "nothing ever happens in this town." He will recover. But his remark started a train of thoughts in the editorial mind, and we are passing them on to you, as is the custom of our profession.

It is true that "nothing ever happens in this town," and that is one of its beauties, its greatest asset. We have no murders, no riots, no race disturbances, no class conflicts, no rowdiness, no disgusting scandals—none of the numerous things that happen so often in many other places.

We have a class of citizens who are law abiding, God fearing, patriotic and who respect the rights of other people.

Our citizens are energetic, thrifty, and are producers—not destroyers. They are workers in the hive of industry—not drones.

Truth abounds, because it is a community of clean and upright people who have nothing to hide from the rest of the world.

It should be a matter of pride to every citizen that "nothing ever happens in this town."

We often speak in a light vein of the manner in which some women "primp." But if we thought more seriously we might speak less lightly. "Primping" is no more nor less than the laudable effort of women to make themselves appear attractive in the eyes of other people.

We men are jealous of the personal appearance of our own particular women. We want them to be beautiful, and attractive, and refined, and not behind others of their sex.

We glory in the admiration that others bestow upon them, and we encourage them to render themselves pleasing to the world as well as to ourselves.

Possibly we are vain of our women. But we have reason to be vain—they are entitled to it all.

Woman is the greatest and most beautiful handiwork of the Creator, and that which the Creator has made beautiful we should endeavor to keep beautiful. Its lustre should never be dimmed.

"Primping" is an aid to attractiveness, and attractive femininity is admired the world over.

Let the women "primp." We like it, as we love them.

A little boy came galloping down the street. He was full of life and spirits, but in the exuberance of his joy he inadvertently bumped into a passing man.

"Get out, you brat—what th' h—l's th' matter with you?" he snarled, with a terrifying glare calculated to put terror into the ear of even a much older person.

The boy stopped, stared in a startled manner for a moment, murmured his excuses, and slunk shame facedly away, crushed in spirit and sore of heart.

And the uncontrolled passion of a grown man did it!

Some day the boy may forget—and he may not. The incident may remain with him as long as life lasts. It often happens that way.

Little happenings in the early life of a child often exert a strong influence in the after life of the adult.

As the seed is planted, so does it often grow, and mature, and die.

"Brat!" and "What th' h—l!"

Harsh words to apply, even to a man, but infinitely more pregnant with disastrous results when hurled in the heat of passion at one of tender years.

A farmer had a horse to sell. It had a serious defect, but one which was not readily discernible.

Another fellow who was in need of a good horse stopped to look at it.

"Sound as a dollar, so far as I know," said the farmer, conveniently forgetting the defect which he knew exist. The animal changed hands, and the purchaser was stung.

A few months later the same farmer went to a neighboring county and paid a fancy price for a bull. Later he found that he had been stung in the transaction.

"I'll have the law on that swindler," he raged, and promptly brought suit against the former owner of the bull.

It makes a difference whether you sting, or get stung.

A citizen met the editor of a paper on the street one day.

"Why don't you publish the news?" he asked, with a disapproving frown. "Young J. got into a brawl and beat another boy up and you didn't say a word about it in the paper. Such things should be given full publicity in order to suppress rowdiness," he resumed.

A few weeks later his own son was rounded up in a juvenile scrape, and he hunted the editor in a hurry.

"Don't say anything in the paper about that little escapade of the boy's," he pleaded; "it was only a lark, and a boys will be boys, you know."

It makes a difference whose boy is involved.

Hello, John, heard the news? The school teacher has just licked the tar out of an unruly pupil, and everybody is talking about it—says he should have whipped him long ago.

"Good enough—I hope he laid it on good and heavy. Boys are getting to be smarter than their parents, and it is time for them to be taught their proper place."

"It's fine of you to look at it that way, John—it was your own boy he licked," commended the first speaker.

"What's that? Whipped my boy, did he? I'll smash his infernal face for him, I will. No upstart of a teacher can lay hands on my boy and get away with it."

It makes a difference who gets the licking.

A young lady had numerous admirers, and caused each one to believe that he was the favored of them all. Each in time proposed, and was strung along with half promises.

The young men dropped onto her game, quietly faded away, and left her without a single admirer, other young men having been told of her duplicity.

"Men are fickle and the worst deceivers ever, and I hate them all," she wailed in her loneliness. "The idea of all of those men proposing to me and then leaving like that! Men have no honor at all."

And it makes a difference who does the deceiving.

When Women Vote.

When women vote next November. They will do things that you will remember.

They will turn this world upside-down And make it square instead of round.

There is a shortage in everything we eat

The pies, bread and all the meats.

When women vote and make the laws,

Every shortage thing will fall.

I love sugar because it is sweet,

But it is too high for me to eat,

There is plenty in this world for all:

Why don't high prices fall?

After the women cast their votes,

The men in office will surely crouch;

The world will be prohibition,

And everything in a better condition.

'No Separate Peace With Germany,'

Declares Cox.

Cambridge, Ohio—On the Court House steps here Governor Cox addresses another large crowd. He again referred to the League of Nations which he said was "the most important question of the campaign."

"We are or we are not to render even moral co-operation," he said, "in giving momentum to the great cause of humanity." His opponent was characterized by Governor Cox "as the reactionary candidate."

"I stand for progressive government," the Governor said, "as opposed to reactionary government. I stand for automobile government as opposed to the old stage coach government."

The league, the candidate said, is a "composite agreement between the nations." He charged that consummation had been delayed by "conspiracy and intrigue of the Senate."

"The candidate of the reactionary party," he continued, "says he will make a separate peace with Germany. He will never get the chance. Just what Senator Harding proposes nobody knows. It certainly means delay."

"I stand for the league and I shall do my utmost to bring about its consummation after March 4th."

That the other nations would reject "the perfidious hand" that would make a separate peace with Germany was declared by Governor Cox.

Referring to Article X, the Governor said "no president can order American soldiers over seas without consent of Congress."

Governor Cox also referred to the Republican front porch campaign declaring that "no power under heaven could keep him there."

A Garden Cafeteria

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union.)

There was a flutter in the Dale family when a letter arrived from the son and brother, Walter, announcing his marriage to Miss Hetty Perkins. He had left his mother and sister on a month's vacation heart free.

"He can't mean it!" gasped Maud who was proud of her handsome, high-spirited brother and had always counted on his restoring the old family prestige by wedding an heiress.

"And a bride from Greenville!" observed Flora. "That's where he has been staying. The very name has a flavor of hay and potatoes. And Hetty! and Perkins! Piebald enough to please the most democratic."

"Don't sneer, daughters, nor discuss it or spread it until we meet Walter's choice," chided Mrs. Dale. "It is certainly a matter of free will with himself alone as to whom he chooses to marry, and I have too much confidence in his sound common sense and judgment to believe that he would select a wife whom we could not respect. Since poor father died we are in a measure dependent upon his bounty, and we must give this newcomer the best welcome we can."

They were born aristocrats, were these two exclusive young ladies—at least they believed so. John Dale had cared well for his family while he was alive, but the extravagance of the loved ones he indulged as to every want and caprice had involved him at last.

"Land poor," Walter had pronounced the situation when he found himself facing serious debts and responsibilities. For two years the family practically lived on what was sold of their realty at a sacrifice. Then, after a sensible talk with his mother and sisters, Walter got down to the practical issues of life and attempted to influence them to do the same.

"There is only one piece of realty left clear of incumbrance," he said, "and that is the flat iron tract. It had some prospects five years ago, but since two railroads have encircled it, shutting it in like a back yard, no one would think of using it for residence purposes, and the only hope is that it may eventually sell for a factory site. Meantime I have secured a good position, so we can retain the old home here and live at least comfortably. You dear people shall be my care, no matter what comes."

And now a casual vacation had changed the whole current of his life. It was a case of love at first sight, the day he met Hetty Perkins. She was an orphan living with a married sister; attractive rather than beautiful, sincere, unpretentious and with a warm heart for everybody she met. The day she arrived at the Dale home, within an hour Flora and Maud were placated by her gentle, appealing ways, and Walter's mother, viewing his happiness, was content. Hetty had been brought up to strict adherence to household duties, and by the end of a week she was cheerfully assuming a due share of the domestic responsibilities of the household. Somehow she soothed the rancor and dissatisfaction of the sisters and encouraged her mother-in-law to hopefulness for the future, when she dilated on the certainty that Walter was the man to make a grand success in business.

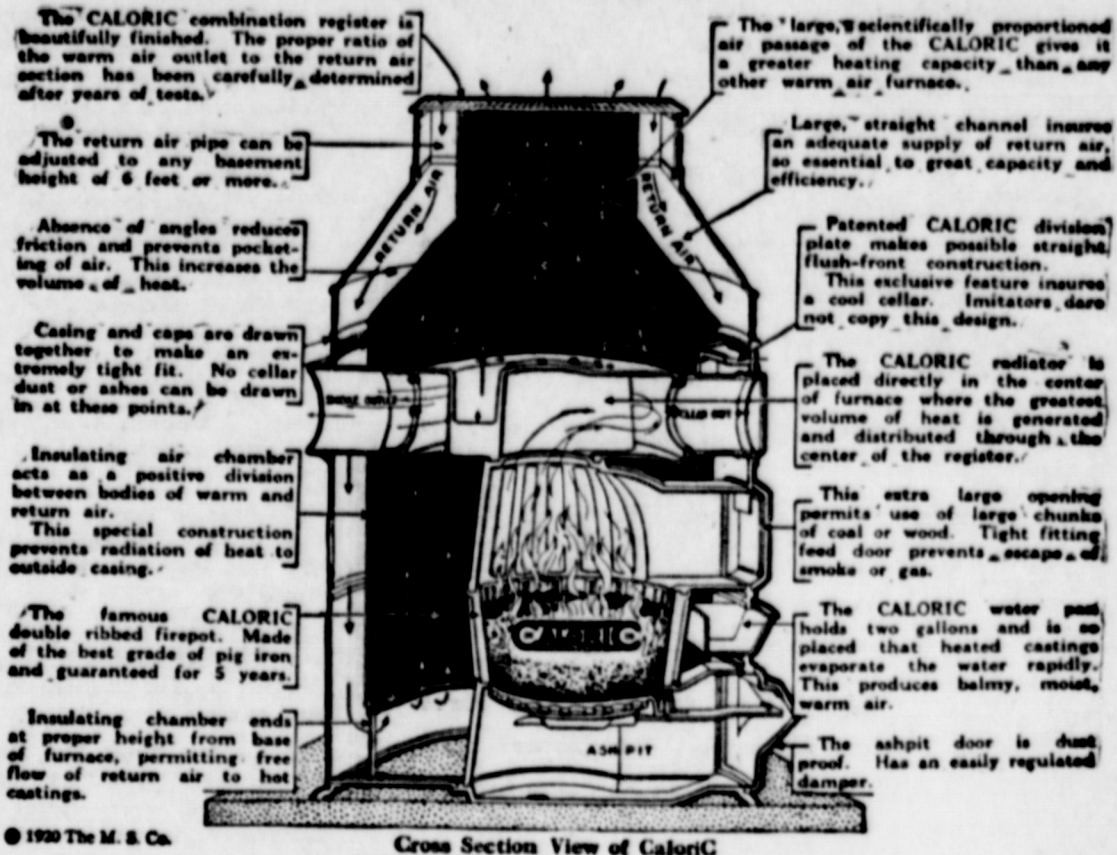

"I am going to make a confidant of you, sister," said Hetty to Maud one day. "We all wish to help Walter, of course and make his burdens lighter, and I feel certain that you will co-operate with me in a plan to effect that end. I went out to look over the flat iron tract this morning. Of course the two railroad embankments that inclose it, except for the boulevards cutting under them, make it valueless for building sites, but there is thirty acres of the best soil I ever saw. You see, I know a good deal about farming. I have noticed people around us cultivating a little patch of garden space, and raising a few stunted onions and radishes as if they were inestimable treasures. That shows the city hunger for something fresh and green. What do you think—it has given me an idea for a garden cafeteria."

Maud looked puzzled. "I don't think I understand what you mean, Hetty," she said.

"Why, just this: You know when I married Walter I had two thousand dollars I inherited from my mother. I offered it to him, but he refused to take it. Now I see a chance to invest it. You, with your splendid education and smart, quick ways at figures, shall be the manager of my great scheme. I understand how to direct hired workers to plow and till the flat iron tract. They will cut it up into blocks—this one planted to cabbage, that one to onions, another peas, and beans, and beets and tomatoes, and so on. And we'll try berries the second year. Well, we will inaugurate a new fad. The tract is right in the city and accessible to residents for miles around. A thousand automobiles pass through it daily. Rich and poor will be invited to visit the gardens with baskets, cut the heads of cabbage, uproot their own choice of onions, load up their baskets, and pass along to where our sweet and pretty cashier, Flora, collects the money for their purchases."

And Walter Dale never realized until six months later what a helpful, practical wife he had, when she revealed the secret of the family speculation and handed him a bank book showing balances in four encouraging figures.

HASELDLN BROS., Lancaster, Ky.

Name Greyhound.
The name greyhound appears to have no reference to the color, but is derived from the Icelandic "grey," meaning a dog.

White Island.
Albion—White island—the ancient name of Britain—was probably given to it by the Gauls, on account of the white cliffs on the southeast coast.

Where Old Servants Are Cared For.
A peculiar institution in Stockholm is an "old servants' home," where servants too old to work are given shelter and care in their last days.

Philanthropy Under the Ban.
In Burma it is rather a suspicious thing to give money for a charitable object. It is supposed to mean that the donor has been very wicked and that he is desirous of making amends.

Ancient Diamonds.
Diamonds were known and worn as jewels in India 5,000 years ago and used as cutters and gravers 3,000 years ago.

Tobacco Seeds Almost Dust.
The seeds of the tobacco plant are so minute that a thimbleful will furnish enough plants for an acre of ground.

"Grand Old Party."
The term "Grand Old Man" was applied to Mr. Gladstone in 1882, and is accredited to John Bright, who used it in a speech that year in Northampton, England. In America the phrase was appropriated and changed by members of the Republican party, who affectionately called it the "Grand Old Party." This at once became a newspaper slogan and in the headlines was shortened to "G. O. P."

Ivory Dust Jelly.
Ivory dust, properly boiled and prepared, makes a fine and pure jelly which is frequently prescribed for the sick.

To Clean Furniture.
If, instead of spirits of camphor camphorated oil be used in cleaning furniture, it will not only remove the white stains but restore the polish.

Wesley's Physical Toughness.
Spare diet and constant exercise in the keen morning air helped to endow Wesley with that amazing physical toughness which enabled him, when eight-five years old, to walk six miles to a preaching appointment and declare that the only sign of old age he felt was that "he could not walk nor run quite so fast as he once did." —W. H. Frichett in "Wesley and His Country."

FARM ANIMALS

SOUND QUALITIES OF HORSE

First Consideration of Buyer and Breeder Should Be Soundness—Examine Thoroughly.

The soundness of a horse is one of the first considerations of the buyer and should be of the breeder, according to the United States department of agriculture. If the animal is not sufficiently sound to withstand the use for which he is intended, the logical time to learn of this is before the purchase. Selection must be based primarily on a thorough, systematic examination; the examination should be based on a clear knowledge of desirable and undesirable qualities.

Not only the presence of unsoundness, but also the condition or seriousness of the unsoundness should be noted.

Temporary unsoundness should be distinguished from permanent unsoundness.

A hurried examination is likely to prove a disappointment.

Observe blemishes, vice, faulty conformation, unsoundness and general characteristics.

Common blemishes are scars from old wounds, poll evil, scratches, shoe boils, and small ruptures.

Common vices are halter pulling, cribbing, kicking, stall walking, weaving and biting.

Common faults of conformation are straight shoulders, crooked, weak, or improperly set legs, ewe neck, long weak back, and drooping croup.

Common unsoundnesses are splints, thoroughpins, spavins, curbs, extreme tula, ringbone, side bones, extreme atrophy of muscles, contracted tendons, and broken wind.

Carnegie, a Well-Conformed Type.

General characteristics include fleshing, temperament, quality, color, and age.

In final selection, look for the good qualities and weigh them against the defects.

"BULSHEVICS" OF LIVE STOCK

New Title Applied by Wisconsin Farmer to the Reactionaries of Bovine Society.

From a farmer in Wisconsin comes a new word for use in the "Better Hires—Better Stock" campaign now being carried on by the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with state and local agencies. He applies a new title to the reactionaries of bovine society, and cites the indubitable fact that scrub bulls are the enemies of good production; that they levy upon the milk, cream and butter checks and compel the farmer to keep cows, where the cows should keep the farmer.

With these charges in mind and with his eyes on the international situation, this farmer suggests that the scrub bulls be known hereafter as the bulshevics.

SHY AT REGISTERED CATTLE

Poor Appearance of Some of Get of Pure-Bred Bulls Tend to Discourage Small Breeders.

One of the biggest reasons today why more farmers are not raising registered cattle is because many of them have seen the get of some registered bulls which they have observed are not much better, if any better, than some calves sired by a good grade bull. If more breeders of registered cattle would use the knife as needed, instead of sending out scrub pedigreed bulls just because they can put the papers on them, there would be more satisfied little breeders and eventually more satisfied big breeders.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

One of the biggest drawbacks to the sheep industry is the stomach worm.

Pigs that have not been vaccinated should not be placed on infected premises.

Prolonged confinement upon a concrete or dry board floor often induces foot-sore lameness in heavy hogs.

The best results come in keeping the young calf in a clean place in the barn until about three months old.

Sheep ticks cause great annoyance to sheep of all ages, but more especially to the lambs after the older sheep have been shorn. In extreme cases they cause loss in body weight.

Gas for Balloons.

Hydrogen is the gas most commonly used for balloons. It requires about 1,250 cubic feet to lift a balloon weighing 100 pounds. Coal gas is sometimes used, as it is cheaper, but is not entirely satisfactory because of its great heaviness.

Active, Anyway.

Paul went with his mother to the country. Fresh watercress from the brook was served on the table and upon venturing to try some for the first time, he exclaimed: "Oh, it's alive!" "Why do you think so?" asked his mother. "Because it bites my tongue," he answered.

Handicapped by Height.

As a rule very tall persons are said to be over-sensitive about their height to such a degree that it often proves a handicap in the way of their success in life. A notable instance of this character was the nine-foot giant of Russia, Machnow, who made a fine living by exhibiting himself, yet he was the most miserable person on account of his height.

Olympic Games.

The origin of the Olympic games is lost in antiquity. The official list of victors begins with Coroebus, who won the foot race in 776 B. C. They were celebrated every four years and were at their height in the fifth and fourth centuries B. C. The games continued until 394 A. D., when they were suppressed by Emperor Theodosius. The modern series of Olympic games began in Athens in 1896.

Historic Bells.

The largest bell ever cast was done to Russia in 1633, and to the intense disappointment of its makers it was cracked in the casting. The bell weighed 198 tons. The earliest record of bells is to be found in Exodus, where they were used as trimming for Aaron's robe at the hem, "a golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate." The pomegranates were in brilliant colors and the bells tinkled to announce to the people when he came and went from the altar.

Let's Be Fair.

During the past few months we have several times heard our home merchants criticised for the prices they charge for their goods.

The home merchant does charge a higher price—a much higher one—than he did before the war. He is compelled to do so or go out of business.

He is paying enormously high prices for his goods in the wholesale markets.

He is paying increased freight rates and cartage.

His help costs him more money and his overhead expenses are greater.

Everywhere he turns he is forced to pay a heavy increase in the cost of conducting his business.

Added to this, he is under an additional pressure in paying the high cost of supporting his family and himself.

All of this must come out of the business, and this can only be done by charging a reasonable per centage of profit over the wholesale cost of his goods.

The home merchant can not afford to profiteer. Were he to do so he would soon be trapped and would thereafter be a dead one in this community.

Prices are high—abnormally high—but we believe the home merchants are as reasonable in their charges as can be expected under existing conditions.

Let's be fair and consider both sides before we criticise.

If your neighbor calls you a fool, don't be too hasty about punching him. He may have blundered onto the truth.

The man with money has troubles of his own. He has to be forever sidestepping to prevent some other fellow from euchring him out of it.

Some men are always worrying over the brevity of women's dresses. If they would make a practice of looking at faces they would have less to complain of elsewhere. We only see where we look.

Many women have already told us that they will be present on this occasion. One half of the seating capacity of the Court House will be reserved for their comfort. Wealthy Indians Are Extravagant

Washington.—Because each adult Osage Indian in Oklahoma gets between $9,000 and $10,000 income a year from his salary in oil lands, Uncle Sam is facing the prospect that they will become public charges in a comparatively short time.

This latest Indian problem has been discovered by members of a subcommittee of the House Indian Affairs Committee. The members of which have returned from a visit to the Indian reservations.

"Many of these Indian tribes," declared Representative Rhodes (Rep., Mo.), a member of the subcommittee, "have shown marked progress in education and in their farm activities, but in the majority of cases the Indian is slow to respond to civilization. I fear the Indian problem will be with us many years."

"The most remarkable situation is that of the Osages in Oklahoma. As a tribe they are the richest per capita people in the world. Last year their per capita income was $8,000. A family of five, therefore, got $40,000. In 1920 the per capita income will be between $9,000 and $10,000. This money comes from oil and gas leases."

"It was no uncommon thing to find a family in which there are half a dozen adult members in which each member owned from one to three automobiles and super-sixes at that. They are throwing their money away. In 1931 the trust period in which these lands are held for the Indians will have expired, and then, unless the government begins soon to withhold some of the incomes it is now paying to the Indians, 75 per cent of the Osages will be charges upon the State of Oklahoma."

Mr. Rhodes is in favor of the government withholding half the money from this time forward for the benefit of the Indians and in order that the State of Oklahoma will not have to assume responsibility for them. "White traders," Mr. Rhodes added, "are very much against the recommendation. They are prospering in and near the Indian reservation."

"We found the Indian warehouse practically empty. There is no justification for their further maintenance. I am in favor of abolishing them. In every case we found the government-owned tribal herd for the Indians has not been a success, and the big irrigation projects have not yet demonstrated that the government was justified in instituting them at the expense of the Indians. The Indians do not use them."

Deafness That Isolates.

Deafness does not necessarily spell stupidity, although a great many people seem to think so. There are any number of clever, intelligent people of good education and broad views who through illness or accident become hard of hearing—or partially deaf. Isolation is the hardest thing a partially deaf person has to contend with, and when one is denied general intercourse with others one is apt to grow selfish and self-centered.

Bank of England.

The Bank of England is not a government institution, as is popularly supposed. It was projected by William Paterson, a Scotch merchant, to meet the difficulties experienced by William III in raising supplies for the war against France. Forty merchants subscribed £500,000 towards the sum of £1,200,000 to be lent to the government at 8 per cent, in consideration of the subscribers being incorporated as a bank.

A FAMILY MEDICINE

In Her Mother's Home, Says This Georgia Lady, Regarding Black-Draught. Relief From Head-ache, Malaria, Chills, Etc.

Ringgold, Ga.—Mrs. Chas. Gaston, of this place, writes: "I am a user of Theodor's Black-Draught; in fact, it was one of our family medicines. Also in my mother's home, when I was a child. When any of us children complained of headache, usually caused by constipation, she gave us a dose of Black-Draught, which would rectify the trouble. Often in the Spring, we would have malaria and chills, or troubles of this kind, we would take Black-Draught pretty regular until the liver acted well, and we would soon be up and around again. We would not be without it, for it certainly has saved us lots of doctor bills. Just a dose of Black-Draught when not so well saves a lot of days in bed."

Theodor's Black-Draught has been in use for many years in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles, and the popularity which it now enjoys is proof of its merit.

If your liver is not doing its duty, you will suffer from such disagreeable symptoms as headache, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, etc., and unless something is done, serious trouble may result.

A "CLOSE-UP" OF THE NEXT PRESIDENT OF UNITED STATES.

Editor and Publisher Interviews Cox and Harding at their Ohio Homes—Candidates Give Views As Journalists and Public Servants.

The two Ohio editorial candidates for the Presidency are men of marked contrasts. In seeking to show some of these contrasts I shall not overstrain; indeed there scarcely could be overstatement. To begin with the approach:

Harding's headquarters are in a plain, two story cottage next door to his own home in a quiet shady street of a country town. A lean and sleepy-looking policeman is the only guard. The visitor naturally looks for a bell-push but there is none, so he opens the screen door and walks in among a small force of secretaries. Like as not, as in my own case, the Senator himself is encountered in the hall. There is a small front parlor for those who must wait, and the little room in which the Senator does his work, receives visitors, holds conferences and issues statements to the men of the press is in the rear. Upstairs are more secretaries. Newspaper men cluster all day long on settees and the railings of the front porch. Dignitaries from afar come for a few hours and fade away.

At The State House.

How different at Columbus!

To get to Cox one enters the grounds of the State House, flanked on either side by great guns and stately statemen, mounts broad granite steps, passes between giant pillars into spacious corridors, crosses a vast rotunda walled with famous historical paintings and swings open the massive mahogany door of the Offices of the Governor. All the pomp and importance of high places are here. Past secretaries, under-secretaries and doorkeeper one slowly penetrates to a noble room where men of fame that is nation wide are waiting their turn to see the Governor. And the Governor is still beyond other massive doors, other secretaries, other doorkeepers.

Yet Senator Harding, amid his simple surroundings, is a courtly and commanding figure; Governor Cox, for all his magnificent setting, is dapper and democratic. Nothing could belittle Harding or alter his grand manner; nothing could turn Cox's level head or give him the grand pose.

Harding is very tall, rather slender and slightly stooped; Cox is short, stoupy and square.

Harding turns to you gently, amiably, takes your hand warmly and holds it lingeringly, his whole manner framing the question, "What can I do for you?" Cox turns upon you abruptly, grasps your hand tightly and shakes it briskly, making a quick inventory of you, as if wondering, "What use can I make of this fellow?"

Harding is mellow; Cox is metallic. Harding lounges leisurely in his seat and likes to throw a leg over an arm of his chair or put a foot on his desk; Cox sits bolt upright, his hands gripping the arms of his chair and his feet planted firmly on the floor.

Harding talks slowly, ingratiatingly, and freely gestures with his hands; Cox is set as rigidly and fires as rapidly as a machine gun.

In Harding there is a glimmer of humor in the corners of his eyes but he seldom laughs; in Cox there is no genial glow but frequent bursts of laughter.

Harding's calm gray eyes look at one frankly; Cox's gaze eagerly, inquiringly.

About Harding's mouth is a kind but firm expression; about Cox's an eager inquisitiveness.

Harding expounds as one entrenched in established principles; Cox discusses workable practices. The one's general line of thought is subjective; the other's objective. The one feels secure in his opinions, the other feels safest in his own experiences.

Harding seems to preface his remarks with "I am going to tell you something." Cox wears an alert aim which seems to be saying "Maybe I shall hear something."

Harding has little liking for interruption while he talks and less for contradiction. "Beg pardon, but are you right in your figures?" I boldly suggested at one point. He brushed my words aside with a broad wave of one hand and a frown for the extension of efforts which shadowed his face but he talked on without stop as though I had not spoken. I tried the same on Cox, and he broke a sentence in two, rang for his secretary and said, "We will have to be sure about that."

In Harding there shows no self-consciousness but indication that he has long ago managed to get away from himself; while Cox shows abounding faith in his own personality and in his abilities to bring things to pass.

One seems to say, "I think", the other "I do."

There is restfulness and reposefulness about Harding only gained by those who have struggled through great efforts to a realization of inevitable triumph; Cox has the alertness and restlessness of one whose successes have stimulated to still higher aspirations, opened vaster visions and spurred to grander achievements.

Harding wore a red rosebud on his coat lapel; Cox sported a big rich gem on his scarf.

Harding's phone rang and he answered, "Hello—is that you Chuck, Say Chuck, drive around this afternoon and let's go to Mansfield. I haven't had a minute's vacation in four weeks." It is easy to visualize Harding enjoying the country and stopping more than once to pluck some richly tinted blossom or a tiny flower nesting in a hedge. Harding could be a happy man stretched out under a shade tree alone with a favorite book.

Cox seemed happiest in the midst of his national committeemen. With him the instinct is to turn to the tumult of busy places, to the quick but sure grasp of main chances, to the jostle of crowds, to the clash of active minds and the heated atmosphere of ardent endeavor and important enterprise.

There is little flavor of sentimentality in Harding's talk. There is no "home and mother" sob stuff comes from him; and yet he for years has made a paper that every mother in Marion wants in her home. The suffragettes of the nation may be suspicious of Harding, but most every woman in Marion county swears by him as womenkind's staunchest friend. His newsboys like him so well that the wildest demonstration made in Marion the night of his nomination was made by them. He does not of such things. He wears a rose but does not mention flowers.

Cox, on the other hand, is strikingly sentimental in his talk. One of his earliest public speeches is recalled in which in introducing a singer to an audience he said, "You will like her voice because it comes from a heart that has made a home for four babies." That is Coxlike. He delights in the velvety taste of sentiment on his tongue but never lets it get in the way of his footsteps. There is a vague but unavoidable impression that in matters of sentiment Harding says less than he feels and that Cox feels less than he says.

Harding carries a printer's rule in his pocket as symbol of his life's interest; Cox carries in his busy head a boyhood vision of exceptional service.

By such as Harding the institutions of civilization are conserved and purified; by such as Cox these institutions are conceived and advanced.

They are alike in that the spirit of eternal youth abides in the soul of each and at the slightest chance romps out to play in their faces.—Editor and Publisher, Columbus, O.

WHAT'S DOING

Among Politicians.

By Will S. Kaltenbacher,
IN LOUISVILLE TIMES.

With the primary nominations out of the way and the campaign chairmen selected, nothing remains but to man the headquarters to start in full blast the fight that will determine the political status of Kentucky and probably the Presidency and the complexion of the Federal Senate. Everything indicates that the campaign will be the most vigorous and intensive ever waged in the Old Commonwealth, which has come to be regarded as a doubtful State, although the Democrats will not concede this point. While relying to a great extent on stump activities, as has been the custom, the Democrats will pay more attention to organization this year than ever before, and in this way will meet the Republicans on their own ground, organization having always been the trump card of the Republicans in a Kentucky campaign.

The most perplexing feature that confronts the managers of parties is the female vote. How many women will go the polls and how will they vote, is the question that is puzzling the men in active charge of both campaigns, with little prospect of an answer until the returns are canvassed in November. This feature of the campaign most vitally concerns the Democrats, the Republicans having a decided advantage in that they can depend upon the almost solid support of the colored women.

Both parties will make special efforts to bag the independent vote, which will most likely determine the result in Kentucky, and on this point it seems to be generally agreed that the advantage lies with the Democrats.

Luck or Skillful Management.

Judge Ralph Gilbert, Shelbyville, is no doubt very grateful to the friends who made his nomination for Congress in the Eighth District possible, but to none of them is he more indebted than to George T. Davis, Liberty, one of his opponents, who clinched his nomination by polling 799 opposition votes in Shelby County. An analysis of the primary vote shows that the Gilbert campaign either benefited by extraordinary good luck or was skillfully managed in diverting so many opposition votes in Shelby County, where they would do no harm. Mr. Davis took his defeat gracefully and pledged his undivided support to Judge Gilbert in the contest with his Republican opponent.

New Up To Sen.

In 1896 George M. Davison, Stanford, was swept by the McKinley tide into Congress from the Eighth District over John B. Thompson, Harrodsburg, his democratic opponent, he being the first Republican to break the long line of Democratic succession, and it fell to the lot of the late George G. Gilbert, Shelbyville, Democrat, to redeem the district, which he did handsily in 1898. Now it is up to the latter's son, Judge Ralph Gilbert, Shelbyville, who was nominated in the recent primary, to win back the Congressional seat held by a Republican, King Swope, Danville, who will be his opponent, as Davison was his father's adversary twenty-two years ago. Eighth District Democrats regard the coincidence as auguring certain success, and they have started the slogan, "Gilbert will get the grapes."

ADAMS.

On Wednesday morning, August 11th as day began to show its rays of light, a pall of sadness came over the community, when it was learned that the Angels of Death hovered its icy wings around the home of Mrs. W. L. Adams and claimed her loving husband. Early in life Mr. Adams married Miss Millie Ann Huffman. To this happy union were born 11 children, who together with one sister and two brothers are left to mourn his loss. To all we extend our deepest sympathy in their dark hour of sorrow.

Mr. Adams was 57 years of age and a member of the Baptist church where he united early in life. He was loved by all who knew him. His death came as a shock to his many friends and relatives. All that loving hands could do was done but to no avail, he bore his sufferings with out a murmur and bravely fell asleep with Jesus. After the funeral services at the Mt. Hebron church, he was laid to rest beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the coming of a brighter day. A precious one from us has gone. A voice we loved is still. A place is vacant in our home. That never can be filled.

CARD OF THANKS.

With a heart full of love and gratitude, we wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy extended in our recent bereavement on account of the loss of our dear husband and father.

Mrs. W. L. Adams and family.

In estimating your pay roll for the ensuing year don't forget that your wife is worth double that of your highest salaried employe. Buck up and whack up.

Painter: It doesn't take long for the weather to show up poor paint.

House Owner: But how was I to know it was poor paint? I'm no paint expert.

Painter: It doesn't take a paint expert to get reliable paint these days—just ordinary intelligence. For instance, you ought to know that there is a Company of paint experts that have been making house paint for nearly fifty years; making it from accurate formulas, mixing and grinding it with powerful machinery; manufacturing every important ingredient; putting in just what all these years of experience have taught them is the best. That Company is the Sherwin-Williams Company and the paint is known to us painters as SWP. Wouldn't you be safe in trusting such a paint?

The painter is right, as we can prove by scores of homes owned in this town. If you want your house to stay painted get SWP from us.
